COST has become a prominent platform for research collaboration in Europe, serving as an important mechanism for coordinating research activities. Joining COST is a valuable opportunity for Georgia and contributes in opening the European Research Area and in deepening worldwide cooperation in cutting-edge research projects.

Dr Tamar Lominadze,
Faculty of Informatics and Control Systems,
Georgian Technical University, Tbilisi

As a member of the COST ENIS Management Committee, I have witnessed first-hand the valuable contributions of this network in promoting international student mobility, fostering collaboration among scholars and practitioners, and enhancing the understanding of the benefits and challenges of student mobility. The ENIS network has been instrumental in shaping policies, programs, and practices that support internationalization in higher education, and I am proud that my university and our country have the opportunity to contribute to its mission.

Ms. Ani Chelishvili,
Head of the Development and International Relations Office, Erasmus and Institutional Coordinator at Business and Technology University, Tbilisi
